White
Wedding

“There are as many kinds of weddings as there are couples getting married. But always, flowers and design are part of the celebration.

Color is where most people start—for some, only the brightest, most rollicking hues will do. Pumped up, wild, convivial color—the kind that shouts out ‘look here, folks, we’re getting married!’”

Spring

J. Keith White, AIFD, used ReCreations containers for the wedding designs shown here. A visionary of flowers for special events, Mr. White works from his Houston design firm, AANDK.

The REINVENTION of PAPER

*Outside, the air shimmers with expectation.
Guests arrive and settle. And somewhere,
under a vast expanse of canopied trees,
a groom stands waiting.*

ReCreations

Every style, every detail that ever lived in the imagination of a bride or groom can be expressed by ReCreations.

Riches of the season:
autumn flowers vivid in every petal.

ReCreations. The icing on the cake.

“Give guests something to talk about. Show them something they’ve never seen before. ReCreations containers give you as many options as there are designs to be created.” for the senses.

A feast

Winter's palette is the crème de la crème:

white in every shade, the sort of tonal, monochromatic elegance that makes you think of words like sumptuous. Opulent. Gorgeous.

An intimate dinner for two...hundred. No matter the size of your event, the setting should invite well-wishers to linger, to eat and talk and raise a glass of bubbly. And with ReCreations, they're welcome to take the flowers home.”
